YOU HAD TO BE THERE

Did you ever walk up to a friend and say "The funniest thing just happened. You won't believe it!" Now that you've completely captivated your audience, you go on and relay the "funniest thing." The punch line delivered, your eyes watering from laughing so hard, and your friend just stands there staring at you as if you were released for the day from the Westboro State Hospital. Feeling completely defeated, even though still hysterically laughing, you say "Well, I guess you had to be there!" Your friend still staring says, "Yeah, I guess so" and walks off.

The theme of the yearbook was the first item the 1988 staff tackled way back in the spring of 1987. Unfortunately, it's one of the most important aspects of the book and none of us at that time really knew what we were doing. We had many ideas and didn't finally decide on "You Had To Be There" as the theme until August of '87.

We chose this as the theme because we really felt it expressed the idea of the book. Just think what would happen if you tried to explain any of the funny, exciting, or disastrous events that take place at W.H.S. to someone who knows nothing about the school. After every story you'd have to say, "Well, I guess you had to be there." To really understand everything that goes on at Westboro H.S. you really do have to be there. But that's O.K. because as students we were there. We were there for the games, the S.A.T.'s, first days of school, the proms, lunches, gymclasses, and even signing in at study.

In this book we'll try to show all of these, and present a real taste of what it was like to be there. 1988 had a lot to write about and as students you'll remember and understand because you were there, but if you're trying to show the book to your cousin from Toledo or your Mom's bridge club and they look at you like you're wearing a scarf and overcoat in July, just tell them, "You had to be there."

WE WERE THERE . . .

Who is Sam Brown smiling at, anyway? Why is David Tashjian watching Betsy Stone's feet so intently?

To anybody who goes to W.H.S. the answers may seem rather obvious. Any Westboro student would know Betsy Stone is competing for the honor of the class of '88 in the annual Competition Day, and if you know Rachel Ballard, you know she only wears her fatigues to the Junior Talent Show for her role in "COMBAT."

However, as we've been saying it's not so obvious if you weren't there, therefore not knowing what these two events are all about. Of course, even seeing the pictures doesn't give the whole sense of what's "going on." Along with the pictures you'll see stories and captions relating to the pictures. Hopefully through the written sections and photos, we'll be able to reconstruct the events of the year. Although there are some things that are gone with the moment: the sounds, emotions, and expressions (however, we have captured an interesting one on Erika Reent's face.) Our goal in this yearbook is to show you the times you missed what was "happening" in '88 and bring back the times you were there.

I think we can agree that last summer was definitely one of the best and most memorable summers. There was plenty of sun and fun for all, and the lack of rain made it easy for us to enjoy all of the festivities.

If you weren't cruisin' Hampton Beach with your friends, you were probably hanging out at Erin Rose's pool which seemed to be a frequent meeting place for many this summer. Shelley Manifold and Michelle Audette (far left) seemed to find their way there, the same with Pam Swett standing with the hostess herself. A lot of our classmates got enough of Westboro during the school year, and headed for Cape Cod as soon as the last bell rang. Others just needed to get away for a few days like the gang below who followed the sun to New York.

We weren't too far into the summer when, as funds ran low and reality set in, many of us had to look for the dreaded summer job! While doing your errands around town, you would probably pass a few of your friends working for the DPW and if you stopped at any grocery stores or department stores, you could find more. Others "worked" for the School Dept., they obviously hadn't had enough of good old WHS and wanted to prolong the year past the required 180 days.

For the lucky souls whose parents and/or bank books didn't make them find employment around town, the summer held day after day of beautiful weather that begged for a minimum of clothing. Glenn Harding and Matt O'Neil were glad to oblige! The same goes for Jeanine Watson in the lower left. For some, the possibilities seem so endless that they just had to have a seat to decide what to do first, like Adam Leeland to the left.

All in all, the summer held so many good times and great memories for all of us that we just can't cover it all here.

STUDENT LIFE:
IT MEANS MORE IF YOU WERE THERE

The Prom, the Talent Show, dances, Competition Day, Senior Breakfast, and the conquering of the balcony are examples of special traditions that have always taken place at Westboro and probably always will.

Between these special events, we the students, take part in a more important event, life at Westboro High School.

No matter how many proms take place or whether it's the class of '88 or '91 taking the balcony, these same events take on a new personality every year. They are unique to those who participate in them.

1988 was a great year for the same old traditions and a great year for some new ones.

In this section of our yearbook we'll try our best to show our view of these events and our lives, but to really understand what happened, you had to be there!

WHAT'S GOING ON

Some people may call it unforgettable or mothers may call it something they'd like to forget. It was frantic, unorganized, and Kafka-esque. It combined humor, dance, music, drama, and magic in a way only the class of '88 could.

The M.C.'s (Master's of Catastrophe) were plummeted by a revengeful janitor, and run over by a bunch of bun-hungry students. But in turn they gave us a few provocative "What if's", they healed the sick and misguided students, they informed us of current events with the Westborough High School News, and most importantly they kept us amused when things began to fall apart.

Of the twelve acts, three were bands. The first one on was "Fast Forward" and no sooner were they on stage, they put it into rewind and were off due to mechanical difficulties. The other two bands that followed were "Locked Out" and "Under the Gun." Other musical acts were a solo by Heather Kelpin and another solo by Dan Karski. He had written the song that he sang himself, winning him the award in the music category. The other winning act of the evening was "The Missionary Man," a dance routine.

Pete McClymer did a one-man comedy skit and Kurt Molziejczuk dazzled us with his magical talents. The Junior girls did two comedy skits. Their first act "In Combat", managed to graze a few egoes even though they weren't carrying real guns. And by the time they were finished with their second act there wasn't a dry freshman girl eye in the house.

The Seniors showed us just how much talent they really had when they did their version of "Fight for your right to party." The more talented seniors were in another act called "The Andrew Sister's," singing famous hits from the 1930's.

It was a night of downfalls, pick-ups, and flimsy ski goggles. People laughed, cried, screamed, went the full gammet of emotions.

The talent show was like a fresh bolt of lightning that hit the auditorium with a bang and the odds of it ever happening again are one in a million.

A Black and White Affair

Done Class of '88 Style

I woke up at 10:30 a.m. and realized two things. 1) Today is the Prom and 2) I still have no money, no gas in the car, and no tux. By noon I'm on the road. I stop to get my tux and see all the other guys that have put off getting theirs until May 16 also. After making a quick stop at the Sunoco station and the Baybank machine, I return home by 2:45.

Feeling confident, I watch T.V., and by 4:00 I'm in the shower. By 4:30, feeling less confident, my mother is helping me with my stupid bow-tie and cumberbund, the ridiculous belt your date makes you order in pink so it will match her dress.

Thinking I'm finally ready, I check everything — tickets, money, and then it dawns on me. Yes, I forgot the flowers. So, I jump in the car, and I'm at the florist in a new world record.

I arrive at my date's house by 5:05, but of course I have to sit there until 5:30 in my tux, because when it comes to girls: even when I'm late, they're later.

It's 5:05, and the doorbell just rang. My date is here, and my hair is in rollers, my dress still on the hanger, and my strapless is nowhere to be found. Mom hops upstairs, while Dad shoots the usual "Nice to meet you; where are you going after the dance?" at my poor date. I can almost hear him downstairs fidgeting with his bow tie and cummerbund. Mom helps out by telling me to hurry up, while dancing around the room as if she were going to the prom herself.

After the usual embarrassing pinning of the flower and flash of cameras, we're off in my date's beat-up, old Chevy. Well, I suppose he at least gassed it up.

We boogied to Big Talk's big hits, cuddled under dimmed lights and bouquets of balloons, and sipped cocktails of Coke and Sprite. The court was selected from the usual parade of weary, danced-out couples by the band. The lucky girls squealed with delight, while the rest of us admired and congratulated them.

But the moment could not last forever, and we all went our separate ways, to a party or home, depending on the curfews laid down by our parents, but only till we regrouped for our excursion to Hampton the next morning.

HERE WE ARE:

TAKE US OR LEAVE US!

Even though we all have our own special groups of friends, at times through these four years we have bonded together as a class. 1988 was no exception and this spirit took on a new look, our unique brand of senior spirit.

Excitement grew towards the end of our junior year at the prospect of summer and our senior year to come, we began to draw together and start organizing activities to show-off our Sr. spirit.

Our first priority was the traditional taking over the Sr. balcony accompanied by Sr. breakfast. We all woke up earlier, so that we could journey down to Abdow's and have breakfast together. Then at twenty to eight we began our noisy procession through town which ended on the Sr. balcony, now officially "ours."

In the following weeks and over the summer there were many class parties ranging from Roman toga to 50's dancing. We still may have been "juniors" but it was a good start to the senior spirit that was to come. Summer may have been over but we had prepared well and were all set on the first day of school to continue with a theme that would last through out the year, Hawaiian beach party! Next came Booster Week, where our class won the spirit award at the pep rally for being the loudest with our own little cheer! We continued the week and our Booster King and Queen, Craig Bradford and Sara Edney won for selling the most tickets to the Saturday football game. That night our first dance was held with a new twist, our very own Chris D'Errico and Jason Debatista as D.J.'s! They were a great success and we danced non-stop to all our favorite songs.

This was just the beginning of our senior activities but we never let up and as time went on our spirit grew.

We Felt a Little on Edge

The first day of the 1987-88 school year was tackled with enthusiasm of summer-bored students and with anxiety from the freshman and new students.

The seniors marched in singing a rip roaring chorus of "Pomp and Circumstance," followed by a more civilized Louie-Louie. The multitude of hawaiian prints and colors all clashed, but you could tell it was senior hawaiian/beach day.

Much too soon, the thrill was over, and we were back to our old routine. The freshmen were busy being confused, the sophomores were busy being happy they weren't freshmen, the juniors were busy wishing they were seniors, and the seniors were busy worrying about what to do after high school.

The usual questions filtered through the hallway: "Did you see her hair?" "He wasn't this good looking last year." "My schedule is all messed up, when can we go down to guidance?" "Is there really a seating plan in study?" "Where's Room 401?"

But soon things got into swing as they always do. Freshmen learn the cardinal rules of being underclassmen: one uses the side-stairwells — avoiding the senior balcony, one walks against the wall in the hallways, one will get cut in the lunch line and will like it, and one will never ask an upperclassman for directions.

Finally, the first day ends, and the students wish it were still summer. They leave the school thinking only 179 more days to go, unless of course you're a senior.

LEFT: The school day comes to a close and students' minds seem to be on things other than school (cruisin', perhaps?)

Many WHS students have a favorite passtime — (usually on the weekends, but there are those Wednesday nights). They get into their cars (or trucks), forget their worries, and drive. We have labeled this zanyness as "Cruisin".

This act of pure spontaneity is usually performed by many students at once who decide that cruisin would be more fun in groups than alone. Girls seem to cruise in carloads full of people, while the guys are choosier about who they associate with, so they go off with their own little clicks. Of course there are times when students have to go out, want to get out, need to get out, but can't. They must stay home and finish their homework (like Cary Marshall who just had to finish that oil painting before anything else!) There are also those kids who have better things to do at the moment than cruise (Like What? you might ask). For instance, Jason English would rather snack and Erin Rose would rather go to the movies.

Well, we've established what cruisin' is, but where do people go when they cruise? Some common meeting places seem to be Wendy's where Jeanine Watson greets you with a smile, or a student's house (where a party might be getting underway . . .), If all possibilities fail, there's always Iandoli's parking lot where students can even find some entertainment, compliments of our class jokesters. But don't be too rowdy because as the party starts rocking, the police start knocking . . .

The Art of Informing

One might wonder how important information is brought to the attention of students at W.H.S. There are many methods used to "spread the word"; some work better than others.

At the beginning of 7th period Mrs. Howland religiously attempts to deliver announcements over the Intercom. Unless you have one of those teachers who gives the class a quiz on announcements, the "better students" have acquired the necessary skill of blocking out all intercom announcements.

To accommodate the ineffectiveness of the intercom method, one of our quickest, most effective and often dangerous methods is put into play-WORD OF MOUTH. Anyone who knows anything about W.H.S. is well aware that words like secret, personal and confidential are not in common usage. For example: If you happen to trip up the stairs to the holy SR. balcony, you can be sure that by the end of the day you'll be receiving compliments on your performance, from strangers. Or if you thought you and 3 of your friends would peacefully enjoy your Saturday night while your parents were grocery shopping, you were mistaken. You'll soon be hosting the biggest social event of the year.

And if you really thought a date could be kept between 2 people, Monday morning will bring a surprise.

A more unique way we have of spreading news is a visual method. SHEETS! Whether it's a field hockey game or a birthday message, if you want to advertise it, spray paint a sheet. There is hardly a day when the balconies aren't draped with at least one major newsflash. After these sheets have been abducted from the safety of the linen closet, a few touches of spray paint transform mom's best sheet into a work of art that will hang from our balcony "bulletin board."

As one can "see" or "hear" there's no problem whatsoever obtaining information. Here at W.H.S. spreading news is an art.

"They didn't (and do

While many WHS students relaxed by the pool or worked last summer, some were still in school. Of course, there were those who were unfortunate enough to have to go to school, but there were two students who went to school voluntarily (yes, VOLUNTARILY!) They even paid to go. Alright, so it was in Europe, and the classes weren't too difficult, but, it was still school. Michelle Audette and Agneta Oberg spent July of 1987 at the Institut International D'Etudo Francaises in Rambouillet, France. The classes they went to were entirely instructed in French, with grammar in the morning, and conversation in the afternoon. While they stayed for only a month, other students were attending between two and eight month sessions at the school. The student body was comprised mainly of Europeans, and the average of the students was about 22 years. The only other American was an 80-year-old woman from California. Agneta and Michelle met people from Germany, Austria Scandinavia, Spain, Japan, Greece, Brazil, and Africa, and fortunately almost everyone spoke English out of class.

The school itself was a four-floor, castle-like chateau containing classrooms, dormitories, a small kitchen, a TV room, and a disco in the basement. Meals were generally vinegar-soaked and few and far-between. Michelle and Agneta most often went into the town of Rambouillet to eat.

Paris was a short 20 minutes away by train, and they went into the city every weekend and many times during the week. They became well-aquainted with the Parisian train system, the Metro; while indulging in sightseeing, shopping, and many other Parisian activities.

Although the coursework was mainly review, they learned a lot about French customs and culture. It was school, but Agneta and Michelle were sad to return to summer vacation in Westboro. They have plenty of pictures of their stay, and many stories about their experience to tell to a willing ear.

As with other years, the American Field Service has provided WHS with an exchange student. This year our student is Katja Regenberg who comes from Muenster, a large town in West Germany. She started her senior year in September, like all of us having to take all the required classes to graduate. No small task for someone who had only studied English for three years. She takes her classes very seriously, regardless of the fact that when she returns to Germany, she will have to repeat the year she missed. Although studying is important to her, we are all able to find her present at sporting events, dances, and all the hip parties around town. When asked what she thought about her new home country, she replied with: "It's a great experience for me! I learn hundreds of new things everyday, but I don't enjoy the load very much."

Katja is a member of AFS, and is involved in the Drama Club. In the production of M.A.S.H. she played the role of none other than a German psychiatrist. It's a pleasure to have Katja as a member of the class of 1988!

Sports for all Seasons

As if schoolwork, sports and various other school related activities didn't take up enough time, there are still those who fit in yet another activity. Two such athletes are Julie McMahon and Kristen Tepper.

Julie grew to love horses from a young age, and at age 8, started riding lessons. As her hobby became more serious, she and her parents realized a need for something more-COMPETITION. Probably her most memorable competition was in Grafton, placing first in the Dersage course. Since then, she has purchased a horse of her own, Jackson, whom she keeps in Holden. Jackson, a thoroughbred, doesn't compete much now, but will have ample opportunity next year. Julie hopes to join the equestrian team in college. Until then, she will spend her usual 5 days a week riding and caring for Jackson, and preparing him and herself for probably some very memorable experiences to come.

Another such athlete is skater, Kristen Tepper. Kristen began skating at age eight, then a resident of Canada. Private lessons and eventually competition came later when she moved to the U.S.A. at age 10. In order to compete, a skater must take a figure test which determines a skater's level of ability. It divides skaters into different levels and at the same time allows them to work up to higher levels of competition. Kristen has also joined the Nashoba Valley Colonial Precision Team. Her line consists of about thirty 17 to 18 year olds. With them, she has traveled extensively to compete. Such trips include those to Rochester, Reno, Tulsa, and also Lake Placid. There, she skated in the Olympic Rink against a Japanese precision team, taking home a silver medal. She practices four hours per week and nine hours during competition. Apart from practice, they also have aerobic workouts and make trips to Boston together. At the same time she continues her private lessons until she leaves in July 1988. Kristen was selected to skate for the Ice Capades for a year. This is just one of many of her goals, and it looks like they will all be fulfilled.

Whistle While You Work

Okay, you've slacked off all summer, now it's time to get a job. Where do you go? You have to consider pay, hours, and of course, how flexible your boss is about giving you Friday and Saturday nights off. But somewhere along the line, you have to buckle down and go out to look for that "perfect" job. Well, it seems that the students here at WHS have a good handle on the job market. There are students working everywhere from Pat's Sunoco to The Willows, from Dairy Queen to Caldors. Many of them even enjoy their jobs!

There seem to be some jobs which attract larger numbers of students than others. Wendys, Dairy Queen, and several other fast food establishments in town seem to have more than their share of student employees. The Westborough Marriott has at least eight student employees, more than the average employer, and they seem to enjoy their jobs.

"Our bosses are really easy about changing our work schedules and they usually honor our requests for time off," said one employee. "The benefits are pretty good too; free food when you work, really low room rates at other Marriotts, and discounts in Marriott restaurants and gift shops."

Obviously, the Marriott is a good place to work. but what about those whose interests lie elsewhere, don't like to get bossed around, or don't want to conform to a regimented schedule? They could do what at least one senior, Chris Gage, did last summer, start his own business.

Well, he didn't really start the business this summer, it is several years old, but it really prospered this year. He does custom carpentry and his jobs this summer ranged from building an addition on a sundeck to tearing down walls and expanding a bathroom. If you have the time and the talent, this could be the way to go. You can make your own hours, you get to keep all of the profits, and the government doesn't withold any taxes. And you're the boss!

Well, whatever your job is, you can be proud that you're earning your own money. We took a poll to find out what you money is spent on, but your answers weren't varied enough to fill a page. The biggest reply was, you guessed it, U2 tickets! cars, clothes, and cassettes were high up on the list also. We'd like to leave on this note: if you have a little extra money, remember, the juice machine would be very happy to take it off of your hands.

Not everyone is at their best in the morning, especially if they're at school. Everyone has their own routine that they follow each morning. The locker room is first stop for many girls who didn't have time to "put on their face". Some even get dressed there! A lot of students who have procrastinating tendencies can be found in their homerooms at 7:45, frantically cramming for an 8:00 test. For the most part the majority of the students are found lining the balconies. The morning is prime time for socializing. From 7:30-8:00, the balconies display human merchandise. What could be more convenient than a casual stroll past "that guy" you've had your eye on, or to hide in a large group of friends and stay inconspicuous. A few students actually use the extra time to do a bit of make up work, and yearbook members can be found scrambling to and fro, collecting last minute sales. Yet as the 7:55 bell rings, the morning is just about officially over, and the day has only begun.

"IF I ONLY HAD A CLUE"

"Today, I'm going to pay attention and understand everything in Trig." I repeated this as I walked to the dreaded room 324 determined to keep this promise I had made to myself.

I walked into the room and said my hellos to everyone around my desk, even though I had just seen them all three minutes earlier in English. I reached down for my notebook and pen. Glancing around I realized everyone was talking and laughing. Leaning over to a friend, I asked, "how can everyone be so calm when in just a few minutes we will be overpowered by cosines and tangents, or is my mind the only one that goes completely blank when in this room?" I waited for a response, none came. I then noticed she was busily coloring in a map due next period and didn't even hear my question. I leaned back slowly.

The bell had rung and the class quieted except for the sound of my friend's green crayola giving life to the Philippine Islands. My teacher walked over to the board and began. I figured my promise would be broken in the first fifteen minutes of class. It seemed everything he wrote was in a secret code written specifically to exclude me. It just dared me to look out the window, glance at the clock or talk to a friend. I tried to listen, as I stared at the board, making a futile attempt to decode what he had written. I thought I was really concentrating, waiting for a breakthrough. Then I saw it, something had happened. I was horrified. Somehow, while I was concentrating the rest of the entire board had been filled. I looked down, my notebook was empty. I checked my friends' notebooks, they were covered with notes, graphs and tables. Where had I been? I was positive I had been paying attention. Then before I knew it he started erasing the first part of the board. I tried to get the notes down, but it was too late. They were gone. I really had attempted to follow along but I was lost, again, as usual. I sighed, the bell rang. I threw my notebook (empty again, except for those first few lines of undecoded secret knowledge) back into my bag. Walking out the door, I thought, "Tomorrow, I'm really going to pay attention and understand everything."

EXPERIMENTING

OUTSIDE THE SCIENCE DEPT.

Hypothesis, thesis, control group, experimental group, and variables are all words unfamiliar to WHS except for that one time you might have seen them in your science text book.

But these are common words to the English Department who, directed by Mr. Trahan, has launched an exciting new program involving two freshman English classes.

The experiment is trying to improve the creative writing of the students. The experimental class does all their writing activities on the word-processor, where as the control class uses the traditional method.

The English Department hopes the outcome will be successful as it may improve the writing skills of future WHS students.

It seems that student's first thoughts after hearing the word "guidance" are, "I was called down there again? But I saw them in September, isn't that enough? . . ." or "I need to change my schedule, can I go down and see Mr. . . . uh . . . uh . . . " When asked who their guidance (forbidden word!) counselor is, often they can't recall, except that "it's the lady with the 'A' through 'H' kids-or is it that tall man who helped me find the UMass application?"

Although to some students, Guidance's sole purpose is to be a friendly hand who can transfer you out of that dreadful Chemistry class (which you never should have taken in the first place), to many other students it is a serious aide in planning the future; whether that be in the job market, college, or anything else.

Students have found the Guidance department's help in the job search very useful. For several years a 'job bank' has existed which lists many part-time job opportunities in community businesses of which students can take advantage.

For those students who are planning for their adult careers, there is the Quest program. This program allows eligible students (eligibility is determined by the school administration) to learn about these careers through hands-on observing. Students have been known to work in medical and law offices, television studios, and management programs-all to help further understand just what's involved in these different fields.

For those who plan college after their Senior year, there is a wall stacked with college material from all over the country and a nearby counselor ready to assist. And if this seems overwhelming, students can use the guidance computer system. The system can literally search for just the right career and college choices depending upon information the student has submitted.

So the next time you're called down to Guidance, don't moan and groan. Instead, realize, "It's your future we're talking about!"

Have it YOUR way . . .

If the WHS cafeteria were a restaurant, what would you call it? Perhaps you would name it "Chez a steak-umm", "Le Scholastic Menu", or even the "Greasy Pencil". The motto might even be, "We cater to the well-dressed, the serious, and the clowns — we're the eatery that caters to ALL!"

Whatever name you would like to assign to the school cafeteria (Be Nice!), you have to admit that it is probably the singlemost important institution in the school. Since the shortest pathway to students' hearts and minds is through their stomachs, you will always find a great many freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors seated at their tables replenishing their lost energy to prepare for their afternoon endeavors.

Besides being a great meeting place, the cafeteria's next most important service is their food . . . What can we say? Students have always been ready to show disrespect to these staples (the mashed potatoes are where?), but these same students also never fail to gobble down the pizza, hamburgers, veggies, 'puddin', and basic chow. It has also been known to be experimental with foreign delights such as pizza croissants, and Mexican tortillas.

So, be you in the mood for a cool salad, or a plate of fried chicken, have it your way and eat in at the Westborough High School Cafeteria.

CHANGES

Westboro High School has gone through quite a few major changes in these past years. For instance, have you noticed our good-old rotating schedule no longer rotates? For those who scheduled trigonometry first period, the change would be more obvious than to others, who were lucky enough to fit in a study either first or last period. Though this switch may have been hard to adjust to at first, many have befriended the non-rotating schedule and have accepted it as is. For those freshmen who never experienced the former change of schedules, be grateful you never had to ask a senior if it was a C-day or D-day, and what a B-bell schedule was.

Another change of pace at WHS was the loss of our former everyday 45 minute activity period. For some, this time slot was never occupied with a constructive "activity", while for others, the time was a necessary part of the day, to attend clubs, do homework, or catch up on make-up work. All in all, the compromise WHS has reached seems to be working out well. A "twice a month" activity seems to be perfect for school organizations, while scholastic work can be done after school, at the expense of a little sports-practice time. Teachers and coaches have been very flexible and cooperative on this subject and the students have learned to reorganize their time.

In exchange for losing the activity period, we've gained a 7th period in the school day. The guidance department was very helpful to students in choosing an appropriate additional course for their schedules. Some students found it to be the perfect opportunity to attain an extra study period, while some have chosen to select a course they may not have able to take without the spare time available. It has also made the scheduling of classes during arena-time a bit simpler, in that more time slots are available for more courses. All in all, this change seems to benefit most students in its flexibility and organization.

There were lots of other small changes this year, such as the new attendance arrangement in study halls, the addition of more night time sports events, the new drama club and its productions and the new MIAA Sports rules announced this fall. No matter how many changes are made in terms of school policy or new events, they cannot change the foundation that Westboro High School is built on. And that's its students. After all, we were there!

"Yes, we DO have a newspaper!"

When asked about the school newspaper, the answer from most students at WHS is a blank look and, "What newspaper?" The truth is until this year, the school newspaper has been almost nonexistent (there had been, a few years back, a "Ranger Review" floating around — a one-sheet publication which few people outside of its staff knew anything about). But this year, for the first year, journalism has been made an everyday course instead of an every-other-day one. This allows for extra classtime which can go into the production of the newspaper.

Now, a school newspaper may not sound very exciting to the majority of WHS students, but the challenge of putting together a genuine publication is a much more complicated process than it seems; as those on the newspaper staff (i.e. the journalism class, under the direction of Mr. Sharpe) have discovered.

First of all, stories are needed. Finding a story suitable for school newspaper guidelines without boring a student to tears can be rather difficult at times. Now we know an article on "A Day in the Life" of some of the students at Westborough High would make very interesting copy. However, stories of that sort may not always be appropriate, as school news stories should not only be informative or entertaining, but also, shall we say, wholesome as well. On the other hand, an article on "A Comparative Analysis of the Technological Modulation Between Drips Through Roof Leaks At WHS", while highly informative, may not always be the most exciting subject around (to most of us, anyway).

Why the title, "The Lobby Observer"? The title was chosen by last year's journalism class because "we wanted to use something central to the whole school", says Mr. Sharpe. That being the case, the lobby is about as central as it gets.

The Choices Are Endless

The first thing that comes to mind when someone says "school, school, school", is probably "work, work, work." BUT it doesn't have to be that way, especially at WHS where there are enough clubs and activities to fit just about everybody's interests. These clubs offer a change of pace to the daily work-work-work, and there is the possibility of a Field Trip (the student's dream), to such places as museums, plays or to more exotic foreign lands, such as the annual music excursion to the Great "Cold" North.

With the new "regular" activity period, clubs and activities have really taken off this year — including new groups and a revival of some traditional organizations. In this section you'll learn about "some" of the more active clubs such as the Cheerleaders, Student Government, and the "smash hit," the Drama Club. However, if a club you're interested in doesn't appear in the section-never fear-there's a group picture in the index of all clubs and activities.

We Had to be WHERE?

I don't know why, but this seems to be the hardest story I have written so far, even though I have so much I could write about-lost pictures, staying after school until even the custodians are gone, etc. Maybe that's because it's 4:15 and I'm sitting in Mr. Kaplan's room by myself-even though we have a 48 page deadline due in 16 days for which there are "0" pages ready. I may be by myself, but I can picture just what would be going on if everyone was here. Gary would be at the computer typing Meredith would be arguing with the photographers, Paula would be counting money, Jason would be thinking of excuses why he can't possibly get his layout done on time, and everybody else would be doing left-over homework.

Being serious though, I was told I was crazy to be an editor, maybe I am, but I've had a great co-editor and an extremely capable staff when they want to be. But no matter how long they put off doing the work, it somehow always gets done, unfortunately, this tends to occur at "3" in the morning, the night before the deadline . . . Anyway, I was afraid we wouldn't be able to outdo last year's book, but I think we have — and I hope you do also . . . see for yourself.

Pam Swett

I have been told by my advisors that when writing copy, one should keep the reader in mind. Several rules apply to this idea: 1) Never write about anything controversial (occasionally, some copy does slip by the final editing and arrives on the very pages you are now reading) 2) NEVER offend anyone . . . well, almost never! . . . 3) Don't make the copy sound nervous, jumpy, or uptight. In doing this; we are sending 'bad signals' to the reader.

It's this final role which I am now thinking about. I am trying not to sound nervous, jumpy, or uptight; however, considering, I have not slept in two days, and have lived every minute of those two days, editing, cropping, and dozing . . . it is pretty difficult to sound calm, rational, and stable. Well, how am I doing? When considering this, please keep in mind that this yearbook has caused severe aging of the two editors, and advisor, and near collapse of the staff. Keeping this in mind, read on and enjoy.

Taking On A New Look

WHS is trying to change its "image" this year and become more of the "center" of attention. They hope to achieve this by the creation of new activities and the redesigning of an old one.

The Imagist and Center Stage are two clubs that are working on improving the creativity at our school.

The Imagist, previously known as Morpheus, is improving itself with a new name, and a new format. I was privileged enough to speak with Mr. Sharpe on the subject of the Imagist and he gave me a message for the outgoing class, "Buy the Imagist. Remember it, and forget Mr. J.".

Center Stage is a group formed to foster creativity through drama. Everyone knows that there are plenty of dramatic people at WHS (We've all seen freshman girls flirt with senior guys). Center Stage hopes to harness this talent for their productions. Their success was seen in their recent production of "M*A*S*H*. Even though there were a few mishaps when the final curtain closed, all were pleased.

This new creativity is going to be very exciting for years to come.

SOMETHING A LITTLE DIFFERENT

Throughout this book and especially in this section, we have written about and organized mostly traditional activities. (i.e. the National Honor Society, Hockey team, and Cheerleaders) But as everyone knows, there's a lot more that goes on at the school that's a little less organized and a little less traditional. Therefore we decided to take these two pages and remark on some of the more unusual happenings and activities.

In following our theme, most visitors at our school would be a little surprised when approaching the science department where greeted by Mrs. George in her "interesting" chapeau. They might also find it odd to hear Mr. Cerasoli singing in room 320 or to walk past Mr. Markvenas's room and feel small explosions underfoot.

However these activities are "old hat" (excuse the pun) for veteran WHS'ers and are just examples of the many slightly different WHS activities.

HERE'S LOOKING AT YOU!

Westboro National Honor Society is a branch of a national scholastic organization in our school which not too many people know about. When most people hear about NHS they tend to think that it's made up of the school's "BRAINS". This misconception was even held by me until I began looking into the club. The first thing I learned about NHS was that membership into the club is not based solely on grades but also on scholarship, leadership, service, and character. At the beginning of the junior year all students who have accumulated an overall B average are asked to apply for admission into the club. The applications are reviewed on the basis of the four criteria, and once the selection process is completed there is an induction ceremony held at the school.

Not only do you have to work to get into this club, but you must keep working just as hard to stay in it. A student has to maintain a B average as well as run the elevator, work at the concession stand at basketball games, volunteer his time for tutoring, and complete a service project in the community. Projects have varied from helping out at the town hall, nursing homes, churches and even cleaning the town resevoir. According to the national by-laws of NHS, the group must hold two fundraisers annualy. In the past NHS has sponsored the traditional carwashes and dances and more recently the popular computer dating service.

This year NHS has a new advisor, Mr. Vital. He has shown a lot of dedication, and it looks like he will be a great addition to the club.

This year's officers are president Dave Tashjian, vice-president Carina Wong, treasurer Andy Labovitz, and secretary Eileen Valis.

Now that you have a better understanding of the organization, you can see that the students in this club do not deserve the reputation of being just "BRAINS", they are students willing to help others out, and lend their time to the school and the community.

BETTER THAN WE THINK

At WHS, many students find their niche in the school music program. Talents in voice can take advantage of Mr. Pappazisis talented choral groups or can participate in instrumental groups ranging from orchestral to jazz under the direction of Mr. Baggett. Under the supervision of these two strong programs, many talented students have emerged from a large group of their classmates to either create professional groups of their own as Andy Oikle and Todd Gobille have with their band (You may have caught their act at the December Yearbook dance.), or to participate in the highly selective musical groups, Jazz Band and Concert Choir.

The Concert Choir consists of 16 students, four tenors, altos, sopranos, and basses, who have displayed a special talent in voice. This talent has carried them to extreme success in competition, especially at the music festival in which the music program participated annually. In 1986 when Westboro travelled to Toronto, the Concert Choir received a silver medal, and in Montreal in 1987, they received a gold medal. Although many positions in the choir will be vacated by seniors at the end of this year, the group hopes to continue its success of the previous years.

In 1987, the Jazz Band won the Central Massachusetts District Competition. The group went on to State Competition and received a bronze medal. There are high hopes and expectations for this year's band — there are several strong, returning veterans and WHS has confidence that the band will continue its streak.

For those who wish to demonstrate their individual talents, there are districts and all states. Districts must be achieved before participating in all states. Tryouts for these groups are held early in December and the main events are spectacular to hear.

Whatever a students fancy, if he or she has talent, WHS is willing to listen . . .

Ranger Marching Band

This summer the WHS Ranger Marching Band took a fresh breath and new step into football season with a week of "marching torture" with summer band camp. Though not everyone could make it, the end result shows that all the practice more than payed off. Swinging and swaying to the tunes of Louis — Louis and stand by Me, the flags and majorettes dazzled the fans with several new show routines. The percussion section stood strong, though they marched out of step, and set the beat for the rest of the band.

Without a doubt, this was the best Ranger band this high school has seen in a long time. Led by Drum Major Caitlin Moriarty and Lt. Drum Major Lisa Lividini, and assisted by a bunch of crazy, fun loving juniors, how could we lose? Capt. Pam Swett, Lt. Jen Garcia, and Sgt. Marcus Borgia led the way to the Breakfast Buffet at Abdows where we began many a Saturday. Mr. Baggett then showed us the way to the field for the three hour marching rehearsal we'd been waiting for all week. After half-time, the thumbs-up from Mr. B. became a common sight as show after show went smoother than imaginable.

The grand finale came with the Thanksgiving Day Game Show. As rain soaked the felt hats, and uniforms ran red into our long underwear, we put on a show to be remembered.

Well, once again the band has put away their overlays to take out the bow ties, but they look forward to a promising marching season next year. (But first they'll have to refill the air horns.)

Enthusiastic!

The start of the cheerleading season didn't take-off as smoothly as some of us veterans had hoped. Before summer break, tryouts for the new fall cheering squad were supposed to be held. Hopefully a large number of eager spirited girls would tryout and make choosing the team easy. "Ha, I shall never use that word again!" Unfortunately this didn't happen because not enough candidates turned out.

After some time, a squad pulled together before summer vacation, leaving plenty of time for the hard part — learning the cheers.

This year the cheerleaders were determined to perfect their skills and strengthen their spirit as any athletic team does during the summer. We practiced for several weeks outside as the field hockey players and track team were strengthening their skills. However, we didn't feel this would be enough to do the trick. So several of us ventured to a summer camp designed to turn out superb, spirited cheerleaders. "What an experience!" There we were surrounded by girls who all dressed identically and treated cheerleading as if it were boot camp in the Army. They got up every morning at six o'clock and jumped, cheered, chanted, and straddled until 11:00 P.M. For them, cheerleading wasn't a fun past-time of their life, but rather it was their life. Camp was HE double hockey sticks, but we survived and returned to WHS the spirited, vivacious, girls you saw leading the audience's spirits at the WHS football games. Now there is something Westboro can cheer about!

STUDENT GOVERNMENT:

It does more than we realize

It started off as an ordinary day. I went to Biology, Spanish, and history. Mrs. Howland's voice exploded over the intercom, " . . . Mrs. Boyle-you have a phone call . . . Cap and gown measurements will be after school in the lobby . . . there will be a Student Council meeting after school in Rm. 331 . . . FRED!!

"Student council?", I thought to myself. "Oh, yeah, they sold me the coke and twix at the Clinton game, or was it Shrewsbury? (my mind is wandering). My day ended with Physics and the bell rang. I went to my locker and then to Rm. 331 to see Mr. Fredette (I soon discovered he's the "leader of the pack" we call student council) about that Shakespeare assignment.

I opened the door, about to announce my arrival, and a room full of students (freshman, sophomores, juniors, and SENIORS) looked up at me. Some were writing, some arguing with Mr. Fredette concerning whether to okay the NHS dance — It seemed to be leaning towards the 'yes' position more than 'no'.

I quietly left the room with a new revelation. I never realized the effort that was made to keep school life flowing as easily as it does. I took it for granted, as many WHS students do, without realizing the importance of student government.

Our governmental structure not only includes Student council, but also a standard executive branch of President, Vice-president, secretary, and treasurer (Wait a minute, isn't a treasurer supposed to keep track of money?, and two offices normally unknown to WHS students-those being SAC (Student Advisory Council) and SCAT.

Along with these traditional offices are two "new" programs in which WHS students participate. They are annual events and are meant to inform students about the mechanics of government, "what makes government succeed, or fail? "How can it be made more efficient?"

In the spring, several girls and boys are selected by a Girls/Boys state representative to participate in that program. These students attend a convention that shows "just what makes the U.S. Government tick?"

In the winter, 2 students this year (Laurie Lightbody and Caitlin Moriarty) are elected by their fellow classmates to attend a program labeled "Government Day". On this day, along with many other students, they help create a synthetic government." By doing this they learn 'hands on' political exper-

As you can see, school life doesn't just happen . . . there are many devoted students who help make it a success and leave you with memorable WHS moments.

Lights — Camera — Action

The A-V club has been around for a long time at WHS, but in the last two years it has really taken off. One of the major reasons for its success is Dave Robichaud. He has been the advisor for the past two years and as one of the club members said, "Without Dave, there wouldn't be an A-V club!" Dave has become friends with all the members and teaches them to use the video equipment during their studies.

The club itself has about twenty five members including president Jeremy O'Neil, and vice-president Phil Lowe. They meet during activities and can get out of studies and "sometimes classes" to help with the taping of goings-on at WHS. In fact, the club tapes just about everything at the school including plays, sporting events, and classes. The club is even willing to tape something special for a student, and many students have taken them up on this offer, especially seniors needing tapes of a particular sport to send t college coaches.

It looks like the club will just keep growing as their "In Sync" program (headed by Pat McGinn) is a big success on channel 32 — Tuesdays and Thursdays at 7:00 p.m, and the club now is even trying to get their own channel WHTV at Greater Media Cable.

WARMING UP

An important part of all sports is warming up and the second most important part is getting up after warming up. But if warming up causes such pain, why do we do it?

We do it for a number of reasons. First of all it helps prevent injuries from occurring, secondly it mentally prepares the team or in other words gets them psyched up for the games. Lastly it enables the players to do their best during the game.

So as you can see warming up is as important as any other part of playing sports if not the most important part. Without the prelimenary stretches we would not have the great results we get from our Rangers.

GIVE BLOOD . . .

One extra curricular activity WHS students enjoy to break up their day is sports. Often, however, it is apparent that this particular activity is not all fun and games. Every season a multitude of bruised, broken, and beaten athletes drag their bleeding, swelling limbs to the training room where everyone's favorite repairwoman eases their pain. There her never-ending supply of ice and tape work magic for all those moments when the athlete begins contemplating a safer hobby such as bingo. Whether it be a sprained ankle or an oozing ingrown toenail, the pain is soon relieved with the help of Ms. Nash.

For some reason the fall of '87 was an especially rough season for the Rangers of Westboro. The soccer team endured both broken arms and a broken hip; while the football team tackled (bad pun) its usual injuries — sprains, at least one concussion, and maybe a few bruised egos. Even the cheerleaders were forced to visit the training room on a few occasions due to "jumping injuries," whatever they might be.

Ms. Nash is quick to point out, however, that the athletes she has worked with are very tough. Rarely has she had to take a player out of a game, but when she has, almost always it was against the player's will.

The trainer's job doesn't end with those athletes on the field, however. This fall Ms. Nash has dealt with injured children who fell down the hill while watching the football game, fans with bee stings, and she even had to cut a few rings off people's fingers. Now with that kind of dedication, Westboro High Athletes are more than grateful for the help of Ms. Nash throughout all three seasons.

Spaghetti suppers . . .
Pumpkin Drive . . .

"Go, fight, win, beat'em!" still sings in my ears as I reflect back on the last four months of Field Hockey. So much has changed since August when I caught first sight of the incoming freshmen players. They hardly knew how to hold the stick, never-the-less, they joined in on a few pick-up games against the older players during captains' practices. But this easy, fun-going pace couldn't help but speed up as summer practice sessions began late in August. Jogging around the track a few times "for fun" became running for a time, as seniors, juniors, sophomores, and freshmen, alike fought to catch their breath before the real practice started.

The league season got off to a great start with the team beating the Hudson Hacks in a most bruising game. We came through the Maynard-rival game with a tie under our belt, and continued on to defeat Marlboro, Clinton, and, yes, even Shrewsbury, our new coach, Colleen Debish's former team. The true test was passed when the night of the Milford "under the lights" game occurred. Last year Milford was the only team WHS Field Hockey lost to, but this time the rivals were beaten (1-0) with a fantastic style of play.

Before many of these games, several fun-loving parents were nice enough to host the famous pasta parties, chips and dip included! The Pumpkin Drive took place during one of these gatherings and the results could be seen on the field at the home game vs. Algonquin. But the greatest of all traditions was the banner spray-painting: "Beat'em, Bruise'em" and "Go Buff!" hung from the balconies as tributes to the spirit generated from dedicated players.

What more could we ask? Well, not only was the season exciting, it was also the most successful that WHS has seen in a while. We captured the league title for the second, consecutive year, and went on to play in two district games. Once again, the parents came through, and shoveled the snow-covered turf in Worcester for us early Sunday morning. The excitement of the day lead to 6:30 under the lights game. The first half which Westboro dominated (3-1) with a lead, of course thrilled the fans. However, fates, was not to be. WHS had a fabulous season in Field Hockey, and many thanks go out to the parents for their cheers, great food, and sore backs, to the JV, for their never-ending support from day one, to the pep band, for their tunes of "Louis, Louis", and "California" but most especially to our coaches. Miss Caldwell has seen us seniors, playing from the start and her constant, good advice and mouthguards, are greatly appreciated. Miss Debish, as a first-year coach, was in a tough position, having just lost several great players, but she truly pulled us together when we needed it — she made us believe in ourselves — and that led to our success.

All suited up, Buff?

BOYS SOCCER

Despite a new coaching staff and a host of injuries to major players, this year's boys soccer teams played valiantly, finishing the season with a 6-10-1 record. This statistic didn't really credit the team's talent and efforts which brought them so close to victory against some of the best soccer teams in the Midland League.

The Rangers were led by tri-captains David Lamarche, Jon Steen, and Jason English who, with help from the rest of the seniors made life easier for Varsity coach Greg Allen. Both he and Junior Varsity coach Matt Trainer were hired on short notice this year and faced quite a task. "We hadn't ever worked with the players and didn't know their weaknesses, but once we got going as a team, we won all the games we should have," said Allen.

The team was plagued with injuries. Senior captain and MVP David Lamarche played a good part of the season with a bruised thigh and broken toe. He was a key defensive player in a defense oriented team. Jon Steen, leading goal scorer for the past two years, went down in the Shrewsbury night game with a twisted ankle, and Jeff Foerester, the starting center halfback from California also injured his ankle, which weakened the midfield. For the junior Varsity Matt Sarkiesian did serious damage to his hip and leg socket, putting him in the hospital and the team, without a strong player.

Though Westboro didn't have the best record, and were faced with many hurdles, there is much promise. Only six seniors are leaving behind a strong team. Star goalie Keith Dorschel should keep out the goals while freshman Tom Borghesi and junior Jeff Rumbaugh put them in.

Well, the 1987 Girls' Varsity Soccer season didn't turn out as was hoped (the final record was 0-15-1. Although the record doesn't show it, the team had some very good games in which the scores were extremely close. Yes, I will agree the girls needed work in the offensive area - we need some SCORES! - but their defensive skills were incredible. Especially seen in one outstanding goalie (and co-captain) Erika Reents. She was the team's goalie last year, also, but really made her mark on the '87 season with hundreds of unbelievable saves.

The unfortunate season record, however, did not crush the team's spirit. There were plenty of pre-game pasta parties, sheets hanging in the lobby and cheers that supported the team. Coach Lowbridge and Coach Hayes added to the spirit with their pre-game pep talks like, "Stay on your man," and "Face-up the ball!"

Maybe the season wasn't so hot, maybe it's one that has become a school joke, but much was learned in those short, three months-sportsmanship, skill, and team pride. So, Westboro girls' soccer, cheer up! Things can only get better.

The Girls deserve a hand . . .

The Girls' sports department has really developed a name for itself in the past few years at WHS. The Field Hockey team, although it has been in existence for many years, has really caught the attentions of WHS sports fans as a "SERIOUS" sports team in the past two years. The addition of a Girls' Soccer team has shown Westboro that Westboro girls like "touch" sports as much as any guy. The Volleyball team is a special symbol of the importance of female sports in the school system: it was a girl sport first that then recruited guys to make it coed rather than the other way around, that is so common today.

And what about the sports that are still only available to the "men"? Well, until recently, girls had to live with "oh well, play something else!!" Not anymore.

When Kristen Girard entered WHS she wanted to play ice hockey because she was good at it. The school had a BOYS' ice hockey team and a girls' field hockey team for those who like hockey. But Field hockey was not what Kris liked, she liked ice hockey and resultingly became the first girl goalie that WHS has seen on the ice hockey team.

Kris has been a sort of symbol to the girls of WHS by showing them that they can play any sport if they're good.

So, you girls out there who want to be the next WHS quarterback star . . . what's stopping you?

Volleyball; we're set in our ways!

The 1987 volleyball season can be described as "funny" if not always fun. Co-captains, Meredith Twombly and Heather Candon, led the varsity team to districts. Together, the team's sense of humor helped them overcome the many difficulties met along the way. The road was a little bumpy, with sometimes short-tempered captains, and combined J.V. and varsity practices due to the lack of a J.V. coach. Fortunately these bumps were smoothed out as the season progressed, with Agneta Oberg managing to keep the captains in line, Kim Maclean intimidating the opponents with her powerful hitting and blocking, and a practice schedule designed to accomodate everyone. A first for this year was the addition of two male players to the team. Jeremy O'Neil and Phil Lowe contributed with their enthusiasm and powerful serves to keep the J.V. spirit high. The senior players were Meredith Twombly, Agneta Oberg, Michelle Bean, Pam Swett, Jen Garcia, and Heather Candon, who always kept team spirit up with their never-ending encouragement. The team would like to thank Coach Corcoran and wish next year's team, which has a great shot at districts, the best of luck.

The Longest Mile

The 1987 boy's cross-country team saw tremendous improvement from last year. They completed their season with a respectable 3-7 record, a far cry from last year. This year's team was small in number, but large in effort. The small group of runners became closely knit, and had much fun during the season. This year's team was lead by sophomore Brad Masters, and also Mark Bean and Joe Fitzgerald. The team was supported by ex-cross country runner Roger "Booger" Brailey, who brought the team soda and his personal insights. The team saw the return of senior co-captains Jeff Galicki and Pete McClymer, both four-year runners. John Valinski, senior, had an eratic team membership, complemented by his fashionable boxer shorts. Lone freshman, Chris Cooper was shown the ropes by the skeptical veterans. Jim Carleo would show up once in a while, and Jed Tenczar's ankle never did seem to get better. John Valinski could be heard muttering, "Why am I here" and the team motto was, "It'll be over in 20 minutes." The boy's cross-country team looks forward to next year as many top runners are returning.

Sprinting to the finish

Our 1987 season began with a large turnout of participants both returning upperclassmen and a promising group of freshmen. The high hopes though soon became disappointment as much of the team was plagued by an outlandish number of injuries. "We often spent more time in the training room with Miss Nash, than with each other on the track."

We did manage to overcome our follies and even retain some spirit. Jen Lancaster headed this department and was chosen the superlative of the "spirited" category.

As far as victories went, Mary Keane led the pack through the season. (When she didn't have her eye on a certain male Algonquin runner!) and made a strong impression at the Districts meet. Kate Thomas was able to also do exceptionally well and her talents carried her to a season finale at States.

Christine Connor contributed to the team in a special way in that she donated her "superb cooking skills", contributed to the ever-decreasing size of our uniforms, and to the ever-increasing good natured ridicule of Coach Doyle.

As the season progressed, the spirits of the team lowered, and lowered until some wondered if they should have stuck to "Buck-Buck and Bottoms up", but, being an adventurous group, they forged onward under the leadership of Kate Thomas and Betsy Stone.

A TEAM WORTH THE WAIT!

After a couple of mediocre seasons, this years team surpassed all pre-season predictions and produced one of the best seasons in recent Ranger history.

Among the leaders were the three senior captains: Bob Haines, Paul Jankauskas and Dave Tashjian. Each one enjoyed an outstanding season on the field. Bob returned for his second year starting at linebacker and was the backbone of a stingy Ranger defense. A three year starter at defensive back, Paul was the leader of a young secondary. Dave came back at his right guard position to anchor what was an outstanding offensive line.

Chris Devaux and Rob Sprague led the Ranger offense. Rob was the leading rusher and one of the top three backs in the league. Chris was an outstanding leader at his quarterback position and also did the kicking for Westboro.

Three players that did not experience much playing time as juniors came back to provide stability for the team. Frank Fenton led the team in sacks from his noseguard position and Dan O'hare who was tied for the lead in interceptions provided strong relief for the starters. Doug Higgons started at left tackle and was one of the most improved players on the team.

The Rangers passing attack featured Rich Eaton and Mike Byrd at split end while Glenn Harding and Jim McGrady provided stability from the tight end position.

Without the play of the underclassmen, the team would not have done nearly as well. Special help came from Steve Leighton, Brian Byrne, Chris Degabrielle, Steve Tompkins and Brian Moore.

The memorable game of the season was the Thanksgiving game. Although the Rangers outplayed the Tomahawks, the tie was not enough to fulfill the dream of the Super Bowl.

Coach Gebo summed up the team nicely by saying, "If there was ever such a thing as a team of destiny, this is truly the team."

"GO FIGHT WIN"

Anyone who plays on a sports team knows that attitude is a big part of whether the team wins or loses.

The teams' attitudes of course, are mostly formed during practices and games, by the coaches and players. But when it comes down to the last two minutes in the final period or when it is tied 50-50 with no seconds on the clock and you're up to the free-throw line, it's often the fans in a crowded gym or in the pouring rain that pull the team through in those final seconds when it counts.

Football probably gets the most numbers of fans at their games from the loyal marching band, cheerleaders, and even Father Tom Sullivan. However many fans are Westboro students, parents, and post-WHS graduates.

Unfortunately, not all teams are this lucky. The golf, gymnastics, volleyball, and other teams usually only get a handful of parents and students to cheer them on, but the members of these teams know how important even the "small crowds' of fans can be in lifting them out of a slump and pumping up their spirits. And of course, all teams can count on their coaches and players on the sidelines to give a cheer when needed.

No matter how many or how few fans show up, all team members thank their fans for being there during the high's and low's.

SURPRISE SURPRISE

Through trying times at the beginning of the season, the Westboro girls basketball teams came out winners with the JV team in 2nd place in the Midland league and the varsity team in 3rd.

The senior co-captains Heather Candon and Erika Reents along with senior leadership of Rachel Ballard and Judy Bond led the team not only with spirit but also with a desire to win. Jen Gorak and Kim Maclean had outstanding seasons along with the newly discovered talents of Jane Gallagher and Lori Riedell.

With these and the aspiring JV players, it seems that next year will be even more successful. We are very proud of the team this year for its unexpected record, and we hope that next year will top it. Best of luck next year!

BOUNCING OFF THE WALLS

The 1987-88 boys basketball team accomplished something that had not been done in three years at Westboro. The team ended up with a winning record in a tough midland league. This year's team was made up of a bunch of talented individuals, most notably seniors: Chris Devaux, Mike Burns and Jeff Galicki who did most of the scoring for the Rangers. These players were all amongst the midland league leaders in scoring.

Paul Jankauskas specialized in defense, while Glenn Harding was called on when the Rangers needed someone to "bang the boards". The Rangers performed well, but fell two games short of qualifying for the Districts, and just one victory away from making the Clark Tournament. To help surpass these hurdles next year, the Rangers will look to this year's starting forward, Bob Crawford, this year's starting guard, Eric Gilmore, and Steve Leighton.

SUCCESS STORY

The 1988 Girl's Gymnastic Team began their season with many goals and ended it having attained most of them. A main goal was to shake off last year's 0-10 record and go for a winning season. They did just that, ending their season with a 4-4 record. This overall improvement wouldn't have been possible without the positive attitude and spirit of the team. This year's team was a very close one (and who wouldn't be close, spending most of their practices in that little concrete closet?) All the girls had their own individual goals. Everyone was very supportive and really pushed each other to work hard. Coaches, Liz Mac Dougall and Grace Zompetti not only offered excellent instruction and motivation, but supplied the team with energy when they came bearing breakfast for the team's four-hour practices during Christmas vacation.

Contributing to the memorable season were fourth-year veterans Kristen McCue, Colleen Donnelly, and Kristin McRae, as well as new talent in first-year team members, senior Kelly Roberts, junior Lisa Costa, and freshman Jen Kahler.

Despite some early injuries, the WHS Gymnastic Team entered the season full force in spirit, making a true team effort to reach their goals. Their record shows they attained one goal, but the team will remember this season for a lot more.

A BOOST FOR ALL

Booster week has been a long-time tradition at W.H.S. It serves to boost school spirit, boost class unity, and boost football players' egos. This year there was dress-up day, a pep rally, elections for king and queen, ticket sales contests for the game, and a dance (D.J.'d by our very own Chris D'Errico and Jason DiBattista).

This year, as in the past, there was an attempt at a dress up week by the seniors, but out of concern for our health and well being, many of the days were cancelled. But we still had our red and white day, and a dress up day. These days were met with much enthusiasm and spirit, which was obvious from the many who participated. One shudders to think what could happened if we had been wearing togas instead of our Sunday best.

The "What grade can scream the graduation year the loudest" contest, or more commonly referred to as the pep rally, was as successful as always in boosting spirits. With new uniforms and new cheers, the cheerleaders showed how talented they really were. The "Tricky" dance finally shattered the dumb cheerleader stereotype we all seem to live by (or at least it changed some of our opinions). The Class of '88 walked away with the spirit stick because they managed to scream above all the other grades even though their cheer was not correctly yelled.

Then finally the Booster game was upon us. The royal Booster court consisted of seniors Sara Edney and Craig Bradford, juniors Nancy Repture and Chris Ferrindino, sophomores Melissa McCloughlin and Jim Driscoll, and freshmen Jamie Curtis and Katherine Forbush. Again the seniors took an award, by selling the most tickets. The sophomores might have had a chance if only someone had told Melissa that she was supposed to sell tickets, or dress up for the game, for that matter. All of our efforts were not in vain because the team managed to beat Clinton.

A new addition to Booster week was the Alumni Soccer Game. The players from the high school soccer team of the 60's and 70's played against the current varsity team. For once, age and wisdom beat out youth and speed. The final score was 2-1 Alumni.

Overall, it was a very successful week for all concerned, not only those involved in football, but all of the fall sports. One can only hope that next year's senior class leads Booster week as well as this year's.

ON ICE

This year's hockey team has shown us that though they lost many fine players last year, they still had a very strong season.

"We were much more of a team this year," Craig Bradford commented about the season. He said that in past years there were star players who stood out, and carried the team through a season. But this year the whole team was strong and when they worked together, they won games. From their final record, it is obvious that they worked together a lot.

In the beginning of the season, they surprised the many skeptics by tying with Marlboro, who is a very strong team. The team continued to play strongly, winning many games. And soon there was fear in the hearts of the upcoming opponents. Westboro was the team to be reckoned with.

Again, Westboro will lose many talented senior players, but if Westboro continues to work as a team, they have a promising future ahead of them.

. . . PEOPLE TO SEE . . .

At WHS, a common, and of course sarcastic phrase, is "I have places to go, things to do, and people to see." As we all know, there's not always places to go and things to do. But, one thing is certain, there's always plenty of people to see! Fortunately, WHS is not overwhelming in population. This has allowed the individual classes to form friendships tying them together. This has also given us the opportunity to have more casual relationships and often friendships with our teachers.

In the following pages you'll see friends, classmates, and faculty members, or any combination of the three.

From the naive freshmen to the more experienced (but not necessarily wiser) seniors to the weathered faculty, we've all been through this year together, sharing such memories as light lunchroom entertainment to often heavy situations. We've made it through, and came out on top of this year.

Frau Simoneau preparing for one of her intense classes.

SHE WAS THERE WHEN WE NEEDED HER

The 1988 Yearbook Staff dedicates this book to Mrs. Linda Simoneau, whose teaching and extracurricular contributions to WHS deserve to be recognized.

Mrs. Simoneau is a foreign language teacher here at Westboro High School — those languages being Spanish and German — and her classes are enjoyed by many students (Freshmen as well as Seniors). Her specialty seems to be German, still a new addition to the school's curriculum. The students know her for her fun, but intense classes ("Do I HAVE to answer in Spanish? SÍ!") which are conducted solely in Spanish or German. The students also have memories of their special times on the trips to Switzerland, Austria, and Germany which she has chaperoned, and have nicknamed her "Frau" (she now seems to be stuck with the name).

Mrs. Simoneau not only is a unique classroom persona, but is also an International Club advisor.

Aside from her curricular duties, Mrs. Simoneau found time this year to volunteer her help to the Yearbook (she typed and edited much of the book's copy for us.) Without her help, the book would not have met completion. For these reasons, the 1988 Yearbook Staff dedicates this book to her.

Frau going over one of her killer tests.

Mrs. Simoneau can usually be found busily at work at the computer.

Best of Luck!

We, all who are affiliated with the goings-on of WHS, wish the best of luck to Dr. William Holland, the former school superintendent as of next September. He first took the office of superintendent in September 1986 and over his two-year administration he did a job well-done, as the teachers, students, and his fellow employees will all agree.

WELCOME!

Westborough High School students and teachers would like to use this opportunity to officially welcome Ms. Eileen Gress into her new administrative position — Superintendent of the Westborough School system in the Fall of 1988. She has made many aquaintences in her involvement with the schools and the best of luck is wished to her in the future.

Yearbook wishes to recognize the second, successful year of WHS Principal, Maureen Zolubos, Assistant Principal, Joseph Mewhiney, and Athletic Director, William Walsh. They first took office in September 1986, and have jointly been the 'hand' that guides Westborough High School. So, if there's suddenly a question of school policy on your minds, take it to the top, and then "Take their word for it!"

Underclassmen

BELOW: Underclassmen always play a big part in the Marching Band.

FAR RIGHT: Mr. Cerasoli singing to a class on National Chemistry Day.

RIGHT: Fred Horowitz showing his stuff on the soccer field.

And Faculty

Underclassman — it's such an unpleasant title, and to think everyone is stuck with it for three years. But don't fear, the rewards are great. The fourth year you can finally be called a SENIOR. Although getting there is half the fun: everything is fun to freshmen, and there are class rings for sophomores, and a talent show, prom and licenses for juniors. So cheer up; that dreaded "u" word at the top of the page is not so bad. In the following section we've tried to capture some of the high moments of being an underclassman, and we've also added candids to break-up the "police mug-shot" look. The veterans of the underclassmen section will notice that we didn't make separations between the grades. The staff thought it would be a new twist for the section while showing the school as more of a whole — not class against class.

We also added the faculty into this section for the same reasons. The staff would like to take this opportunity to recognize the great efforts of these men and women to make Shakespeare, Algebra, Spanish and Chemistry understandable languages to us day in and day out. And a special thanks to the many teachers who offer their time out of class to give extra help, advise a club or coach a team.

Hats Off to the Class of '91

Are these freshmen, or what? Only freshmen would actually wear the hats that Mrs. George tried to make us wear for her on Chemistry Day. On the other hand, this is a definate display of spirit that this bunch has and also, the potentials for this self-assured class.
Thanks to the planning of the science department, Chemistry Day once again took place and everyone got involved. There was alot of food, learning and fun that made Chemistry Day the success it was. Mr. Cerasoli sang a Chemistry song for us and Mrs. George gave us instructions to cut out our hats (thanks for the picture, freshmen). This coming together on Chemistry Day is just another example of the spirit we share as a school.

Secret Santa

The busy, rushed feeling in December that we all know so well was put aside for a week by the senior class' own version of Secret Santa. Secret Santa, arranged by Erin Rose, involved the merry making of about forty seniors. Lasting for four days, each participant gave and was given a specific task for each day. Days began by arriving to a tinsel and ribbon decorated locker and the always original task of the day. Some of these tasks included solo song performances at lunch, wearing something not quite the norm, or even announcing that Rudolph the reindeer was your best friend. The whole school joined in on the laughs and lunch was so on the highlight of the day.

We completed Secret Santa by gathering at the home of Erin Rose. The Secret Santas were unveiled and gift giving followed. Finished by a toast of holiday egg nog, we hoped that this fun senior activity would become one for the upcoming classes. Next year, the class of '88 will be gone, but the spirit we promoted through Secret Santa will leave its lasting mark.

The up and coming of the sophmore class is shown here at the annual Josten's class ring sale. As much as two and three hundred dollars will be spent for these school rings. Swarms of sophmores every year gather around the display that will soon transform them into an upperclassman. This can be called a year of trial and error, where as many are starting to fully understand just what is ahead of them and the new challenges they will face. Given the opportunity to sponsor a dance this year, they will test their effectiveness and influence as a class. And come June, with the arrival of their class rings, they will be official juniors.

The Year of the Drivers' License

Jen Lancaster, president of the junior class, has just taken her S.A.T.'s. While waiting for her results she, like many, must achieve her standards of academics. Along with this, becoming even more so involved with activities, meet up to her own responsibilities, and somehow maintain her composure. At times, she may find herself tired and flustered What has just been described is the pressure of junior year.

While dealing with these pressures, however, one must have some sort of outlet. The junior class had a successful dance this fall, which turned out to be a practice for organizing their prom. This year, they started the nouveau idea of having the Jr. Prom, not at school, but at Indian Meadows. They also have the chance to show off their talents and raise class funds at the Junior talent Show. Though this may be the toughest year, it will prove to be one that includes much work, interaction, and eventual unity in a class.

THE CLASS OF '88
A FUNNY THING HAPPENED ON THE WAY TO GRADUATION

"A Funny thing happened on the way to graduation." This thought entered my mind as I approached the podium, my tassels swinging to and fro. It was like a mental scrapbook that my mind flipped through in seconds.

Freshman year and arena scheduling. When first hearing the word "arena" all I could think of were hockey games and bull-fights.
— Looking back on it, bull-fights would have been a lot less messy . . .

Sophomore year and I was first introduced to Shakespeare. Come to think of it we saw A Mid-Summer Night's Dream, over and over and over again (I think I now have Puck's lines memorized by heart)
— Looking back on it all, we should have made that the Senior Play — we wouldn't have needed scripts . . .

Junior year was a double hitter. First was the Talent Show and it was like nothing we had ever seen. Coupled with it was the Prom where I wore the dress that made me look like an angel (the truth is I sold my soul to pay for it).
— Looking back on it all, maybe we should have skipped the balloons and headed straight for the beach . . .

Senior year was the quickest memory to fly through my mind. It seemed like yesterday was the BREAKFAST, an hour ago was the Ball, and only five minutes ago was the Banquet.
— Looking back on it all, my four years at WHS had its mishaps; there were some sad, happy, and most of all funny times.

Looking back on it all as I was being handed my diploma, I thought to myself, "I wouldn't have changed a thing."

ABOVE AND LEFT: Many things have changed in the 13 years between 1975 and 1988: especially that Doug Higgons hasn't been seen in any plaid jackets lately nor does Kara-Jean Barrett sport her "sequins and satin" very much any more.

YOU HAD TO BE THERE

This is page 167, and therefore, I should attempt to wrap things up, but after sitting here for a half an hour, I've decided that 1988 can't be summed up in a few choice words.

So, on this last page, I'd just like to reflect the wishes of the entire yearbook staff in that we hope we've well represented the events of 1988 and the attitude and atmosphere of the school. We also hope our objective of bringing these subjects back to life in a way that you the reader can remember them if you were there or learn about something if you missed it was accomplished.

So, remember 1988, and remember to tell non-WHS students who don't understand the importance of humor of an event "You had to be there!"
